What is PAL?
The Program for Advancement of Learning (PAL), has received international recognition as one of the first of its kind to assist college-able students with learning disabilities to meet their goals while they are fully integrated in main-streamed courses.

What is PAL for Multilingual Students?
PAL for Multilingual Students (PML), housed within PAL, targets the unique needs of non-native speakers of English who also have LDs. This is not an intensive English program! Instead, it provides support for improving academic English skills, for developing successful learning strategies, and for making a successful transition to studying in a new cultural environment.

What kinds of students enroll in PAL for Multilingual Students?
- International students
- Students who have been raised in bilingual homes
- Bilingual citizens from other U.S. territories (like Puerto Rico)
- Adoptees from other countries, raised by English-speaking families

What does PML provide?
Students enrolled in PML receive all the benefits of PAL with additional advising, academic language and cultural transition support. Additionally, peer support and mentoring are an essential part of the program.

What are the admissions requirements?
In addition to regular academic requirements for admission to Curry College, the following are required:
